Experience

Amanda is an associate on our Construction Litigation team. She has represented an assortment of clients at the trial and appellate level for claims associated with the planning and development of various projects including single family residences, condominium developments, commercial buildings, and roadway projects. Her typical clients include architects, engineers, contractors, subcontractors, and material suppliers involved in contract and warranty disputes, construction and design defect litigation, and product liability actions. She also advises and represents clients involved in insurance coverage disputes typically arising from property damage claims.

Thriving on complex cases, Amanda has an eye for crucial details and can often identify legal obstacles and recommend a solution well before there is even a problem. Whether faced with a multi-million-dollar lawsuit or a small insurance claim, Amanda's clients value her calculated and result-driven approach, knowing they can always expect a legal strategy that accounts for their best interests, both legal and financial.
