Experience

Originally from Houston, Texas, Brandi has lived across several Southern cities, bringing a broad perspective and diverse experience to her legal practice. After spending time in Atlanta, Georgia, she moved to Jacksonville, Florida, where she graduated from high school. She went on to attend Florida State University in Tallahassee, earning a Bachelor of Science in Criminology. Following her undergraduate studies, she relocated to Tampa, Florida, where she earned her Juris Doctor from Thomas M. Cooley Law School.

Before joining Taylor, Day, Grimm & Boyd, Brandi built a strong foundation in a variety of legal areas, gaining experience across multiple practice areas. Her time at the State Attorney's Office for both the 10th and 4th Judicial Circuits was particularly formative. There, she represented the State of Florida in numerous evidentiary hearings and jury trials, committed to pursuing justice with diligence and integrity.

Now in private practice, Brandi draws on that prosecutorial experience to pursue every available defense necessary to protect her clients' rights and interests. She approaches each case with thorough preparation, strategic insight, and a strong sense of advocacy.

Outside of her legal work, Brandi enjoys staying active on the water, traveling, and spending quality time with family and friends, and being outdoors with her adored hound dog.
