Experience

Nate was born in Charleston, West Virginia and earned his bachelor's degree from West Virginia University where he majored in Political Science. While attending WVU Nate was a member of the varsity swimming program where he participated in the NCAA Division I Championships, US Open, and United States Olympic Trials. He then went on to receive his Juris Doctor degree from Barry University Dwayne O. Andreas School of Law where he was Chief Justice of Moot Court and an Executive Board Member of the Law Review Journal. While in law school, Nate was a finalist at the New York City Bar National Moot Court Competition.

Before joining Taylor Day, Nate worked as a legal intern for Jacksonville Area Legal Aid. While in law school, Nate worked as a law clerk for a regional defense firm in their Jacksonville office. Nate then went on to handle general liability defense and designated complex actions with a Florida-based defense firm where he represented businesses and individuals throughout the State of Florida.

During his free time, Nate enjoys spending time with his family, camping, and cheering on the West Virginia University Mountaineers.
