Experience

Nicholas P. Bussé attended Florida State University in Tallahassee, Florida, where he graduated with a Bachelor of Social Work, with honors. He then attended Florida International University College of Law. While in law school, Nicholas received the Book Award in Professional Responsibility. During his time at Florida International University College of Law, Nicholas also was a law clerk for the Honorable Judge Ivan F. Fernandez of Florida Third Court of Appeals where he worked on a myriad of cases.

After graduating, Nicholas accepted a position with a large, private civil litigation firm where he practiced in a wide range of civil litigation areas such first-party property, premises liability, construction defect, catastrophic trucking accident defense, and motor vehicle accident defense.

Having joined the Taylor Day team, Nicholas continues practicing in the area of bodily injury defense.

Nicholas lives in Jacksonville with his wife and son and enjoys spending his free time traveling, cooking, and cheering on his favorite sports teams.
