Experience

Tanya is originally from Central Florida. She attended Florida State University where she earned dual degrees in Russian and International Affairs and studied abroad at Moscow State University. She returned to Florida State University for law school, where she was an Articles Editor for the Law Review, a member of the Business Law Review, and a member of the Moot Court team. Her Moot Court team won the 2011 World Finals of the Manfred Lachs Moot Court Competition, and she graduated Cum Laude.

Since graduation, Tanya has worked in claims, in-house, and in private practice. She has focused her practice on Insurance Coverage, Construction Litigation, Bad Faith, and general Commercial Litigation. At Taylor Day Law, she focuses her practice on Insurance Coverage and Bad Faith. Outside the office, Tanya enjoys spending time with her husband and children, baking, and assisting mothers in the community throughout pregnancy and birth as a doula and lactation counselor.
